Treasure Valley's Plantation Country Club Treats Newly-Remodeled Clubhouse Facility Against Coronavirus

Country Club management engages HouseCheck's disinfection and protective protocol to combat viruses, bacteria, and other harmful allergens

BOISE, ID - During the depths of the Coronavirus crisis this past winter, Boise's popular Plantation Country Club took the opportunity to complete a multi-million-dollar renovation of their lavish clubhouse facility. This renovation completely renewed the formal dining room, bar and grill, banquet facilities, meeting rooms, pro shops and locker rooms.

In addition to the renovation, management has taken the extra step of bringing in a professional sanitizing service – HouseCheck Environmental Services -- to treat the facility in order to minimize any possible Coronavirus exposure.

"We want to do everything we can to make our members and customers feel safe and comfortable here," noted Jayson Petersen, General Manager of Plantation Country Club. "We secured the services of HouseCheck Environmental to come in and carefully treat the entire facility with a sanitizing agent to achieve the maximum possible level of protection from Coronavirus."

HouseCheck Environmental Services is a company with years of experience in identifying and mitigating all kinds of environmental hazards. In addition to programs to disinfect and apply protective properties against Coronavirus, HouseCheck offers both business and residential services related to detection and elimination of mold, radon, lead, drinking water impurities, and many other environmental contaminants.

"We're proud to help Plantation Country Club meet their goal of creating the safest possible environment for their customers and members," explained Sean Perry, Vice President of Business Development at National HouseCheck Corporation, the parent company of HouseCheck Environmental Services. "The protocols and agents we use are approved by the CDC and the EPA for cleaning and disinfecting areas that have been, or may have been, exposed to Coronavirus. We've successfully treated facilities of all sizes throughout the U.S., and our goal is always to help people feel confident and comfortable in a treated facility, whether they work there or are customers. Plantation's management has taken a huge positive step by engaging us to treat their clubhouse."

Plantation Country Club is open with some social protection protocols in place. For Plantation membership information, event planning, or reservations, call (208) 853-4793, or visit PlantationCC.com.
